Is Matthew Perryman Jones on YOUR playlist?

If not, maybe he should be! He made critic Brian Mansfield's Playlist in yesterday's USA Today, which "highlights ten intriguing tracks for your downloading consideration." Of Jones' single, "Save You," Mansfield writes: "This gorgeous, slow-building pleader is just one of many pop pleasures on the Nashville artist's Swallow The Sea."

Ingrid Michaelson Stands Up To Cancer

Ingrid Michaelson's new single, "Be OK," is from her upcoming cd of the same name. The album, to be release in October, will also include new songs that haven't been heard outside of her live shows. A portion of the proceeds for the project are benefitting Stand Up To Cancer (www.standup2cancer.org). Stand Up To Cancer will be broadcasting a one-hour telethon on ABC, CBS and NBC on September 5. On her website, Ingrid is encouraging fans to email pictures of themselves with the words "Be OK" written on their faces to be included in an upcoming video. You can submit your photos to beok@ingridmichaelson.com.

Bloggers talk about Backyard Tire Fire

"A Backyard Tire Fire review practically writes itself. Take everything you love about Patterson Hood's emotional grit, The Old 97s classic barnburner footstompers, and the spirit Whiskeytown had when Ryan still had something to prove, and you've already got a good sense of what the band is about: Rockin', drinkin', raisin' hell and kicking ass through the use of well-placed power chords.

The band's new record, The Places We Lived, is no exception. It's Midwestern Americana at it's slice-of-hard-life best. This album is a little more folk-y than their last one—a little less gritty in many places, and it has much cleaner production. But it's still a real solid record. I particularly enjoyed "Everybody's Down" and "How the Hell Did You Get Back Here." - Berkeley Place blog

Also, Johnny Hickman from Cracker has been talking about them every chance he gets: "My favorite band right now is Backyard Tire Fire and they sometimes remind me of early Wilco, Son Volt and Flaming Lips. And they unabashedly name check both Wayne Coyne and Tom Petty in song. They are my earworm the last few months."

People are making time for Meiko

Last week when Meiko's new single "Boys With Girlfriends" and MySpace Records self-titled debut were made available on iTunes, the release was mentioned on renowned gossip site perezhilton.com (he's a fan) and was also put on Tom's player on MySpace. Within hours, sales were through the roof. The album became the #1 seller on the iTunes folk chart, with #2 being her iTunes-exclusive EP. Six of the top 20 tracks on the iTunes folk singles chart were from her album, with "Boys With Girlfriends" being the top seller. Since being posted last Tuesday, the single has had over 325,000 plays on her MySpace page.
